

FIGURE 1.5 The effects of an increase in the saving rate

We are likely to be particularly interested in the behavior of output per worker, Y/L . Y/L equals $Af(k)$. When k is constant, Y/L grows at rate g , the growth rate of A . When k is increasing, Y/L grows both because A is increasing and because k is increasing. Thus its growth rate exceeds g .